BATC members earn national residential construction superintendent designation

ROSEVILLE, MINN (May 31, 2006) — The Builders Association of the Twin Cities (BATC) is proud to announce that 13 of its members have earned the Residential Construction Superintendent (RCS) designation from the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) this spring. These hands-on employees of 10 local builders have graduated from a comprehensive and intensive training program devised by professionals at the national level to provide a higher degree of professionalism in the field for residential construction job superintendents.

The Residential Construction Superintendent series of courses is designed for site personnel wishing to excel in their position. Created by the NAHB's Home Builders Institute (HBI), the courses cover issues and subjects identified by NAHB members as critical to a field or site supervisory job. Upon successful completion of the curriculum, students are certified and earn this prestigious designation.

"I was very pleased when BATC began offering the RCS courses," remarks Curt Swanson, 2006 BATC President and President of Swanson Homes. "As a builder I want my job superintendents to have as much knowledge and skill possible to ensure our homes maintain a consistently excellent level of quality and value for our buyers. This course helps do just that. I am very proud of my two superintendents who earned this designation."

Congratulations to these 13 RCS designees:
